EUROPEAN LETTERS.

BY DR. H. F. TEFFT

Down to Canterbury.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

We are now, my good reader, in the ancient and marvelous old city of Durovernum, as the soldiers of Cæsar and Agricola used to call it, but which is now known as Canterbury, and as a preparation for the reading of this letter, I would recommend you to recall all you can of what the antiquaries and historians say of it. It would be a good time also to post yourself up in that celebrated work the Canterbury Tales, by Geoffrey Chaucer, whose writings laid the foundations of the present condition and style of the English language The perusal will repay any one for several days' labor, and the odd orthography will be no stumbling-block to those who are familiar with the scribblings of Artemus Ward and his school of writers

These Tales will have the advantage of taking you over nearly the same ground I have led you over in getting to Canterbury from the old Bridge of London, and by looking into Camden and the other English antiquaries, you will see that Canterbury was a city of magnificence at a period so remote in the history of Britain that London was its inferior in size and population, and, in fact, a mere country village.

So very ancient is this old British town that even the antiquaries can tell us nothing of its origin Its very name is as yet an unsolved problem The Roman name of Durovernum is only the latinized form of a much older title, for it was evidently made out of Dwrwhern, a rapid river, or Dwravona, the river-water, or Dwrarguerne, the discharge of the water, by all of which epithets it was known among the ancient Britons

An ancient work, which I have found here in England, written by Geoffrey of Monmouth says that, in the ninth century before Christ, this Canterbury was a city of some importance, and though the leading antiquaries do not indorse this statement, they furnish no evidence whatever to contradict it Recently, many facts have come to light, by the diligence of a new class of antiquaries—our modern ethnologists—which seem to confirm Geoffrey's statements, for instead of relying solely on traditions and legendary accounts for proof, they have put their spades into the soil, as Layard did on the mounds of Nimrod and Babylon, and they have brought up bushels of Druidical heads, called glamnadh, and cart-loads of old British military weapons, known as celts, in the form of battle axes, knives and hatchets

The testimony thus adduced indeed, is overwhelming, for they show a far greater antiquity for Canterbury than the boldest of the literary antiquaries had claimed for it These celts, be it remembered belong to the stone period in the history of the human race, and this stone period precedes by many centuries the brazen, when all military as well as domestic implements were made of brass The third period in the annals of the world is the iron, which, in modern times—say, since the founding of Damascus —has been transformed into its present phase by the discovery of the different modes of making steel Ethnologists, indeed, are now in the habit of tracing the history of the human race backwards through these three periods of iron, brass and stone, the stone period is the oldest of the three, and there is no known method of getting to a lower antiquity of any portion of the human family than these celts proclaim Having read nearly or quite all the leading works on the antiquity of man including that of Sir Charles Lyell and the authorities he quotes—having spent several years in the great libraries of Europe for this sole purpose—having devoted now about thirty years to these antiquarian studies and come to some definite conclusions on the subject, I cannot believe that the origin of the race can be carried further back than the time allowed by the Mosaic writings, but this stone period is evidently the oldest of which we have any intimation; and to this, without the shadow of a doubt, must be ascribed the founding of this time-honored English capital, on whose chalky soil we now impress our feet Right here, indeed, on the beautiful landscape we are now surveying, dwelt the old stone hatchet Britons, whose bodies were entirely nude in summer, in winter loosely covered in wild beasts' hides, and it was the descendants of these original inhabitants of Japhetic origin, whom the Hamitic Romans found here, at about the beginning of the christian era, in a condition parallel to that of our wild Indians To me it is a day never to be forgotten, that I lift my eyes upon the spot where, in all probability, the first rude beginning of the early English settlements was made, and I seem to be wafted back, as on the wave of eternity's ocean, to the time when remotest ancestors were but an infant people

Having, on many other occasions, examined numerous reliques of ancient Britain taken from this region, let us now step into the little museum of antiquities kept in one of these foot-worn streets London has robbed it of its most precious treasures, but putting London and Canterbury together gives us a very full account of the old British Dwravona Look, for example, at these old Roman coins, the very money once in the pockets of Cæsar's soldiers! Look at these old Roman vessels, culinary and otherwise, from which the officers under Cæsar took their breakfasts drank their wine, and poured out their heathenish libations! Look at these Roman tesselated pavements, so curious in design and execution, on which once walked Cæsar and his thundering legion! Look at these old, brick walls, reared nearly nineteen centuries ago, by the hands of British captives working under the eye of Roman architects, the materials for which were transported in Roman galleys from the clay- bottomed valleys of the Roman Tibur! Look here in this ancient thoroughfare, known now as Castle street, where the Roman castle of the period evidently stood, and behold the remains of the Roman arch, which was doubtless one of the many arches of a similar character, on which the stronghold of the Roman conqueror of Great Britain rested for support!

This arch was discovered in the days of Charles the First, and there is an account of the trip he made, when he went down from London to Canterbury to see it We may be standing, therefore, on the very spot he occupied, on that beautiful June morning, before he lost his head! In another part of the city, in the parish of St Margaret, there was once exhumed a Roman pavement of mosaic work which has excited the admiration of the entire British public, and in 1730, a fire Roman vase of red earth, showing it to be not British—for the clay here is very grey—with the Latin Inscription—Faraget de Teve—plainly embossed upon it!

When the Roman soldiers were withdrawn from Britain, and carried back to Italy for the defence of the Roman capital against the savages of the North of Europe, those savages rushed at once into the country thus deserted; and the Saxon conquerors, in process of time, rubbed out the Roman name of Durovernum, and called the city Kant-warabyrg,—the Kentish man's city,—which was gradually modified and shortened into Canterbury. It belonged, indeed, to the old Kingdom of Kent, but it has become a city and county by itself

American readers of English history have often wondered how a small and dilapidated old town like Canterbury can be the religious capital of Great Britain, when London is two hundred times as large and perhaps almost as ancient But this question finds an easy solution in the ecclesiastical history of the country. In the Roman period the apostle Paul, it is believed, preached in London, and even founded a church where the cathedral of St. Paul now stands, but in those days Canterbury was more populous than London and it was the seat of the Roman domination over Britain The Romans did not like to trust themselves so far in the interior as London They preferred Canterbury on account of its nearness to the sea and to France, and they constructed the great Roman roads—to Dover, to Lymne, and to the Portus Rutupensis, wherever that might be,—as military works, the remains of which are still extant It is likely that St. Paul visited Durovernum also; but I have heard of no tradition to this effect. It is well known, however, that St Augustine, the great missionary to the British island, sent by pope Gregory, selected Canterbury as the center of his work, when he became the first bishop then the first archbishop of the British church, he continued to reside at Canterbury, and his cathedral and palace being built here, it has been quite natural for all his successors to remain on the site made venerable by his success, his popularity, and his virtues

London, however as it seems to me, would have been a more fortunate location for the ecclesiastical primacy of England Canterbury, as I have said, is on the direct road to Dover and to France. It is on the highway, therefore, which would naturally be taken by all the invaders of the country. Near to it also, lie the two noted islands of Sheppey and Thannet, which the murderous Danes used to occupy for their winter quarters, and in the spring of every year of their numerous invasions, Canterbury would come in for a heavy pecuniary contribution, or for military aggressions amounting almost to an absolute annihilation Even so late as the year 1011 the Danes burst into Canterbury, set fire to the city, destroyed the old cathedral and the episcopal palace, and murdered the inhabitants in cold blood, they amused themselves with the women, then threw them into the flames of the own burning dwellings, and to carry that amusement to the highest pitch of barbarity, they would toss little children in the air, and catch them on the tips of their long pikes as they returned It is reported that over eight thousand of these innocents were thus murdered at one time, and such scenes were repeated for a whole century nearly every year Several times the city was burnt to the ground When William the Conqueror entered England Canterbury had become again the largest city in the Kingdom, and as peace followed upon this conquest, the old city remained the ecclesiastical capital of the country.

But the most notable circumstance in the history of Canterbury is the story of Thomas a Becket, a story as interesting as any tale of Romance, and it was his death there that perpetuated the importance of this place in the church of England

Thomas a-Becket was the son of a London merchant. He was born in 1119. Receiving the rudiments of education in the old monastery at Merton, in Surrey, he went to Oxford where he was made in process of time, chaplain to the archbishop, Theobold From Oxford he went to the University of Paris where he gained a great reputation as a scholar, whence he next removed to Bononia, where he again pushed forward his studies under the most celebrated masters On his return, he was received into the family of the archbishop, whose admiration of his talents was unbounded, and who did so much for his promotion, that in 1154, at the age of thirty five, he was made Chancellor of England In this office he soon became a favorite with Henry the second, and in 1155, the King made him archbishop in the place of Theobold.

No sooner was he fairly fixed in his high position than it was found by the King that the young Archbishop was going to be no pliant tool of royalty. Inflexibility the most uncompromising appeared at once as the leading element of his character He began immediately to take steps for the advancement of his power, and was not long in coming to a measurement of authority with the King himself. Henry, seeing this disposition in him, set himself in opposition to his own Minister Becket strove to separate the church of England from all control of the English Government, and make it entirely dependent on the See of Rome. This through the power of the priesthood, would have made the Archbishop the virtual monarch of the land Perceiving this, the King called a council of his kingdom, which decreed that no appeal whatever, on any point ecclesiastical or political,should go to the pope without the King's consent; that no subject should be excommunicated without the King's approval; and that every crime, or misdemeanor, of ecclesiastical persons should be tried, not by priestly tribunals, but in the royal courts. Becket, however, arrayed all the clergy of the kingdom against these decrees. A parliament was called. The royal decrees were matured into statutes, and yet so weak was the authority of law, that the King would not publish the enactments, until he had prevailed on the youthful archbishop to append to them his episcopal signature, which the Pope, as Becket knew he would, immediately annulled.

Becket soon repented of his pliancy and put himself under penance for yielding to the King; and in his turn, the King brought a criminal action against his protege, charging him with the embezzlement of funds belonging to the church. Becket refused to appear declaring himself above the law of the civil power; and the King was so enraged by this conduct, that he brought another action against him for perjury and treason. Becket's estates, real and personal, were confiscated But he again refused to acknowledge the authority of the English courts, suffering himself to be condemned on all these charges without defense. When the court was deliberating on the sentence, in presence of the King, they were astonished by the sudden appearance of the refractory archbishop, who, cross in hand, walked into court, declaring that "though the King's weapon could destroy his body, damned the and destroyed the soul "

The King at once ordered him to be seized, but Becket's movements were as prompt as they were bold. Mounting upon a swift horse, he rode in hot haste to Sandwich, the King's officers pursuing at his heels; but his speed was too great for his pursuers; and jumping into a convoy the moment he reached the sea, he made his way to Flanders, and thence to Rome, where he laid out his case to the willing ears of his best friend, the reigning Pope. To the same tribunal Henry himself soon appealed. For six years the [illegible] was hanging at the Court of Rome.—Be[illegible] [illegible] decrees of excommunication against the Court that tried him. He went so far as to threaten to raise a revolt in England against the King. The King was thrown into great consternation by these resolute proceedings. He sought and obtained several interviews with Becket in the presence of the King of France. He was willing to do anything to recover his position with his domineering subject. At the final interview, the King yielded every point, promised to drop all the prosecutions, to restore the young Archbishop to all his dignities and properties, and even humbled himself so far as to hold his stirrup as he mounted the horse that was to carry him on his first stage to the land he had left as a fugitive but six short years before.

On his return to power, Becket rose to a pitch of authority he had never before assumed. He was virtually the monarch of the country, his will was supreme; every knee had to bow before him, and the King, who had gone over to France to seek repose, thus weakly resigning his kingdom to his opponent, saw no termination to his troubles but by the death of the archbishop. One of his loyal bishops, indeed, said to him one day, that there would be no peace in England so so long as Becket lived. "And is there no one," replied the King, "among the numbers I maintain, bold enough to relieve me of the insults I endure from this mighty priest?"—The hint was comprehended. Four of the King's attendants conspired to awe the archbishop into submission, by threats of violence, or to take his life.

Going to Canterbury, and stationing armed men at every needful point, they entered the Episcopal Palace for the purpose of carrying out their threat. They found him in conversation with a number of his clergy. They ordered him to restore at once all the persons he had excommunicated, to revoke all his violent decrees, and make an immediate atonement to the King, whom he had endeavored to dethrone. Non-compliance with these demands, they told him, would cost him his life, and as he could manage as before to effect his escape.

But the victorious prelate refused to comply with their demands, and he scouted the idea of saving his life by flight. The conspirators left him for a little time and then returned. He had retired to the cathedral, and his attendants proposed to close the gates, but he refused, ordering them out of his presence as a batch of cowards. It was at the hour of vespers; and the brave archbishop was ascending the steps toward the choir, when the armed knights entered with a shout. 'Where is the traitor?' they exclaimed. Becket replied in a firm and fearless tone, 'Here is no traitor, but here am I, the archbishop!' The premeditated attack at once followed. A blow aimed at the archbishop's head nearly severed an arm of one of the officiating priests who raised it in defense of his superior, and glancing from the priest's arm, it fell with such terrific force on the archbishop's head, as to cleave off a piece of his skull. Other blows followed in quick succession, till the archbishop fell, though unarmed, he had fought with great courage, at one time almost overpowering his armed assailants, but was finally dispatched, and his brains, which had been too much for all his enemies, though armed with the laws of the land and the authority of the King, were scattered on the marble pavement of the church and trampled under foot.

The conspirators at once fled to a stronghold in Yorkshire, and the King was charged with the murder by the people. But the monarch took an oath of innocence, he threw himself on the clemency of His Holiness, he obliged himself to walk barefooted to Becket's tomb and submit to be publicly scourged by the monks of Canterbury. All these penalties for the bare suspicion of crime were actually inflicted. The night after, he slept on the bare ground before the now sainted Archbishop's tomb, for the people had not failed to recognize the services of Becket by enrolling him among the saints. His clergy professed the utmost reverence for his saintly character. They wrought the most stupendous miracles by use of relics he had left behind him. The King and nobles of the land made frequent pilgrimages to the new martyr's tomb, thousands of people took up their residence in the city so as to be as near as possible to the consecrated spot, and in this way, Canterbury rose to more than its pristine magnificence and has continued to be the centre of ecclesiastical influence and power in England to the present time. London has grown to be the capital of the commercial world but the blood of this one man has continued the ecclesiastical supremacy of little Canterbury, and the story of his life will be repeated while the English language contains the letters for the perpetuation of his name.'

You cannot wonder that, as I stood looking down upon the spot where the ashes of this Napoleon of ecclesiastics lies, a thrill of something akin to admiration ran along my nerves, and I am free to say that this one man's story, more than the Roman antiquities, more than the reliques of the stone period, more than the splendid monuments of ancient and modern history that appear on every hand was the magnet which drew me to this interesting spot. But I cannot finish such a place as Canterbury in a single letter. It has been seldom visited by Americans; and I must reserve the balance of what I have to say about it to another communication.

LONDON, March 4, 1870

GOOD ADVICE. At the last meeting of the New York Sorosis Mrs. Robert Dale Owen made a speech, in which she gave her younger sisters some good advice. She said:

'The truth is, woman's work is not estimated in the cost of living. Every thousand dollars in money that comes into a house has two thousand added to it by her labor. And so long as women have the providing of man's food they can govern him as they choose. All this vast amount of domestic work has to be done, and ought to be done well. There was no reason why it should not be held in as high estimation as esthetics, which were all very well in their way; no reason why it should not be thought quite as respectable. And the only way to make it so was to preach it up as having a pecuniary and intrinsic value, and to make every girl feel, upon leaving school, that she was to select at once some life-work for herself, and that unless she had some life-work for herself, and that unless she had some peculiar talent in another direction, that domestic labor was as high and elevated as any. She declared that no young woman should be willing to marry unless she were able to support herself, and could feel that she did not not choose a husband that she might become a dependant. She did not approve, however, of married women earning their own living. She thought it would ruin all the men in America if their wives supported themselves, their domestic duties, properly performed, were enough for them, and should be recognized at their proper value."

And to this latter sentiment all reasonable members of the "sterner sex" will say a hearty Amen!

JOHN H LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

FRIDAY, MARCH 18, 1870

Mr Seward has got home. It is reported that he did not purchase during his absence the South Sea Island haunts of the cannibals or any more icebergs or volcanos. He did however, after landing in New York predict once more—it was a ninety day prediction, too—that in three months we should practically return to specie payments. We trust that now that he has no longer official connection with us he will not prove the bird of evil omen he was when the rebellion was to be crushed in ninety days and that the days of specie payments are not far removed, taking his words for a sign. But whatever becomes of Mr Seward's prophecies, Mr Seward himself should be allowed to rest in private quiet also after this. We say this with emphasis because of the facts relative to the value of Mr Seward's little speculation called the Alaska purchase, now being developed. For example according to present appearances it will cost to carry on the governmental machinery in Alaska about six hundred thousand dollars per annum, while the income from all sources will be about twenty two thousand. Add the difference of these sums for an indefinite period to the cost of purchase, and judge if the Ex-Secretary hasn't cost the United States enough to entitle him to peace and quietness for the balance of his days.

The agitation in favor of competitive examinations in the matter of Cadetship appointments now going on all over the country is wholesome and encouraging. But it is not a new style of doing things in this part of the country. We may pretty safely say that no Maine Congressman can be suspected of peddling these important Congressional privileges. Messrs Peters, Blaine and Hale have each advertised public examinations upon certain days open to all eligible young men and a Committee has decided for them who should be the favored candidate. Last year an appointment was awarded in this way in this district after a severe examination. The beauty of the plan is that none but proficient and capable young men will apply, and the service is sure to be benefitted by the Cadets that are presented at West Point.

The Democrat excuses the failure of more Democratic work at the city election in Wards 3, 4, 5 and 6, by the fact that its friends are there in a minority and have to contend against discouraging odds. It even thinks that but for this its candidate for Mayor would have succeeded. A little [illegible] this. We don't know how to interpret this statement, except as indicating that quite naturally had the Democrats been possessed of the ballot boxes, the ballots would under their careful eyes have been more fairly [illegible] more evenly, distributed.

The steady progress made in the reorganization of the internal revenue business under the present administration may be seen in the following table, giving the aggregate receipts for the year ending at each of the dates mentioned.

June 30, 1869,	$159 1-4 1-7
July 31, 1869	[illegible]
August 31 1869,	164 170 897
September 30, 1869,	167 [illegible]
October 31, 1869,	169 [illegible]
November 30 1869,	172 [illegible]
December 31, 1869,	174 39 [illegible]
January 31, 1869,	174 [illegible]

It will be observed with interest, says the Evening Post, that the substitution of each successive month of the new administration for a month of the old one shows an increase in receipts. To this increase might fairly be added the amount received last year from taxes which were abolished by the act of 1868 but arrears of which continued to be collected, in considerable amounts, for a year afterwards. On the whole, the internal revenue laws are by far the most satisfactory branch of our financial legislation, and the general administration of them, while still admitted by the best officers to be imperfect, is improving steadily, and promises well for the future.

The reduction of the cost of iron, steel, copper and lead is a necessity to the successful prosecution of our industrial interests.—These metals constitute an important element in the construction of railroads, of ships and of machinery, as well as of houses and factories, and how their cost is to be reduced presents an important question for solution to the statesman and economist. If steel rails could be made available for use at $4[illegible] per ton, the cost of transportation could be essentially reduced, and with a corresponding reduction in the cost of the metal to the mechanic the costs of ships, machinery and agricultural implements might be reduced, until the products of our workshops would command the markets on this continent of China and Japan, and be represented in all the markets of the world.—[Providence Journal

True. And yet the Committee of Ways and Means propose to raise the duty on steel thus adding expense to our already burdened industries. Commerce can never be healthy, trade and agriculture can never be healthy till we seek to relieve the people by reducing the prices of such articles as enter largely into our industries through a reduction of tariff rates upon them.

A remarkable letter, published in the New York Tribune, concerning General Geo. H Thomas, and the battle of Nashville, Tenn. discloses some military secrets hitherto unknown. It is in reply to the assertion of the Cincinnati Gazette and other papers that General Grant's order relieving Thomas and putting Schofield in command was a great blunder, and that by Halleck's intervention or some other fortunate circumstance the country was saved from the disastrous consequences which must otherwise have resulted from this "blunder" of the General-in-Chief. The writer, who fought at Nashville asserts that there are many things connected with the late war that might be better kept secret during this generation did not justice require that the truth be told. He claims that after the battle of Franklin and Hood's farcical attempt at a seige of Nashville nobody had any doubt but the result would be the total defeat of Hood's army. Regarding the attack upon the rebel forces and the number of men required he claims that Thomas made a mistake of 10,000 men, that upon this error being explained to him, he gave verbal orders for its correction so far as to place the surplus 10,000 men in reserve near the attacking force, where it lay idle from early in the morning until afternoon. This mistake, he says, deteriorated much from the success of the first day's engagement. So sure was Thomas that the fight was over he could not be induced to give orders to renew the attack in the morning. Consequently, many of the troops lay idle until late in the day, and when they did attack it was too late to profit by the brilliant success which was gained only a few minutes before dark. The result of this inaction was that Hood made good his retreat across the Tennessee, with more than 50 pieces of artillery, much the larger portion of his trains, and nearly all his men who were not killed or captured in his trenches near Nashville. Although a great victory had been gained it is claimed that Thomas was by no means justified in ordering his troops into winter quarters. On the 7th of January, 1865, General Grant telegraphed an order to Gen. Thomas to send Schofield and his corps East, and about the same time ordered the Fourth corps to the Gulf. Thus ended Thomas' plan for a campaign during the summer after the close of the war. The writer says the facts he has produced show Gen. Grant was not guilty of a "disastrous blunder" in ordering Thomas to be superseded before the battle of Nashville, and concludes by asserting that if his special friends had been so discreet as to "let him alone," "Old Pap Thomas" might have died in the happy enjoyment of a reputation for generalship as well as for patriotism and [illegible].

This bill in effect throws open every grogshop on Sundays and all night through a pretence is made of shutting them from [illegible] and forbidding the sale on Sunday of anything stronger than Lager Beer. Liquor is King in our State. [illegible] and rules despotically, as Kings like to do." But this is not the end.

HON. GERRIT SMITH AND THE CUBANS. Hon Gerrit Smith has sent another $1000 to the suffering Cubans. In a letter enclosing it to Hon Cassius M Clay, President of the Charitable Aid Society of New York, he says:

"It has long been a favorite [illegible] with me that the Creator has put the whole human family in charge of the whole human family. The world has no liberty to abdicate its government of the world. The ultimate responsibility for the manner of governing every portion of it rests upon the whole of it. If the wrongs of the French and English and American peoples at the hands of their respective Governments shall become intolerable, and otherwise irremediable, then the other nations of the earth, falling back upon their ultimate and supreme right to do so, are to redress these wrongs. There is now an actual case of the kind we have here—but suppose [illegible] the world, our own nation especially included, is deeply guilty for failing of its duty in the case. There lies at our door one of the most fertile and beautiful islands of the whole world. Its native population decrees the abolition of slavery and asserts the sacred right of self government. Foreigners invade the island, and are busy day and night in enslaving men and slaughtering men. No nation comes to the rescue, or to the least relief of these brave ones who value liberty more than life. But nations calling themselves civilized and enlightened help these barbarous and bloody foreigners in their infernal work. America is their most conspicuous and effective helper. We trust that (notwithstanding) future ages will be able to regard her as a civilized and Christian nation, but surely surely they will not be able to do so in the light of this [illegible] passage of her history."

He was a native and till within a few years a resident of Gouldsboro, Maine. He served in the Navy as a volunteer officer all through the rebellion, entering the service as Master's Mate in April 1861, and soon after was promoted to Acting Ensign and Acting Master. At the close of the war after being given six months furlough he was discharged with the thanks of the Department and Congress for honorable service, and returned home and attended three terms of the E M C Seminary at Bucksport, commencing September 1866. In the fall of 1866 he was permitted on his own request to report for examination to re-enter the Navy and was appointed an Ensign. The Season and its Dangers

The human body is chiefly composed of tissues and fibers as sensitive to every change in the condition of the atmosphere as the most delicate electrometer, or the quicksilver in a barometer tube. The stomach, the skin, the nerves, the lungs, and the excretory organs are especially liable to be affected by these variations, and the best defence against their disastrous tendency is to keep the digestive machinery which feeds and nourishes the whole system, in good working order. If the stomach is weak or disordered neither the blood nor the bile can be in a healthy state, and upon the fitness of these two important fluids for the offices assigned to them by nature and the regularity of their flow, health in a great measure depends. When the air is heavily laden with chilling vapors as it often is at this season of the year, the digestion should be an object of peculiar care. If it is weak and languid the whole physical structure will be enervated. If it is vigorous, the entire organization will be strong to resist the untoward and depressing influence of a damp and vitiated atmosphere. A pure and powerful tonic is therefore especially needed as a safeguard against the diseases most common in the spring, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters being the most wholesome and potent medicine of the class at present known, a course of it is particularly advisable at this period of the year. The stomach will thereby be toned and strengthened, the liver and bowels regulated, the nervous system braced up and nature put in a state of active defence against the miasma which superinduces intermittent and remittent fevers, rheumatism, nervous debility, headache, hypochondria and other complaints which are apt to assail the untoned and unfortified organizations. The body is strengthened without exciting the brain, and consequently no unpleasant reaction follows the reviving and renovating operation. mch8 eod[illegible]

PHENIX Insurance Company. BROOKLYN, N. Y. Office, Nos. 12 and 14 Court Street. Phenix Building nearly opposite the City Hall. Branch Office in New York, No. 173 Broadway, Corner of Cortlandt Street.

Insures against Loss by Fire, Ocean, Marine and Inland Navigation and Transportation Risks.

The Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., was organized under the laws of New York, in September 1853, with a paid up Capital of $200,000. The Insurance Laws of New York are universally admitted to be the BEST IN THE WORLD [illegible] the Policy holder is protected at all hazards.

The Official Reports of the Company to the State of New York Every Year since its Organization are as follows:

December 31, 1854, Cash Assets, less Liabilities, [illegible] 1855 [illegible] 1856 [illegible] 1857 [illegible] 1858 [illegible] 1859 [illegible] 1860 [illegible] 1861 [illegible] 1862 [illegible] 1863 [illegible]. In 1864, by a new Cash Subscription, the Capital was increased from $200,000 to $500,000. December 31, 1864, Cash Assets less Liabilities, [illegible]. In 1865 the Capital was increased to One Million Dollars, by a Cash Subscription of $500,000. December 31, 1865, Cash Assets, less Liabilities, [illegible] 1866 [illegible] 1867 [illegible] 1868 [illegible] 1869 [illegible].

DECEMBER 31, 1869 the Company could have paid back its Capital to the Stockholders, re-insured every risk in good companies, paid off all Liabilities, and have a net Reserve of over $300,000. This result has been attained by a careful scrutiny of Risks, a careful selection of Agents and an economical management of the Company's affairs. And, as in the above period, so few Companies have "held their own," especial attention is requested to this showing of the onward progress of the PHENIX.

INDEPENDENCE OR ANNEXATION

[From the St John Globe]

Mr Galt enunciated his "Independence" views in the House of Commons with great force and ability Referring to some of the Government and to some of their supporters, who were decrying his views, he said "that he had heard from the lips of some of those who were loudest in their applause and speeches on the subject of royalty, just as strong statements (on Independence) as had yet fallen from his own" Referring to the letter he had written when the honor of Knighthood was proferred him, he said,—that in that letter, he had expressed the view that the Confederation of the Provinces, as intended by the home Government would lead to their ultimate separation from Great Britain. He went on to say,—That was a policy he thought that would greatly tend to lessen the complications between Great Britain and the U S That it would tend to remove a feeling of uneasiness in this country with regard to our position relatively with the United States in the unfortunate event of hostilities occurring, also that he did not suggest anything like an immediate separation of the country, but thought that the connection should be maintained as long as it was consistent with our mutual interest, but that it should be understood, or, if possible expressed, that the people of this country would be called upon to legislate for themselves As is well known Mr Galt's views did not prevent the Crown from knighting him and, he claimed, therefore, that he stood on the same ground as the ministers of the Crown in England, and he was not afraid of the charge of disloyalty that had been made against him, charges which he knew would [illegible] upon those who had made them He knew perfectly well what loyalty was It was a man giving his best energies to the service [illegible] the progress of his country, Mr. Galt [illegible] that those men who continue to keep the [illegible] mind back from the contemplation of [illegible] dependent national status are the men [illegible] will most surely drag these colonies into [illegible] S It was none the less true that the [illegible] upon the public mind of teaching them [illegible] they cannot exist unless they are holding [illegible] the skirts of a great power for all time [illegible] will most surely, when the connection with Great Britain is severed—as the connection with G B will be severed—and the [illegible] is not educated to the point of being that we cannot stand alone, it is certain that annexation will ensue. He asked if [illegible] he could look at the connection which exists between this country and G B with[illegible] perceiving that it is a source of difficulty to her statesmen and at the same time of danger to ourselves. English statesmen were teaching us by their actions for their actions spoke louder than their words. lessons of self-reliance, and every step that is now taken is one in that direction. What did it all mean? Mr Galt ended by saying that [illegible] now [illegible] was proposed; he would not say when he would vote for it, but it was one of the questions of the future, and we should prepare for it.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS

FIRE About 12 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the cellar of the wooden building on Kenduskeag Bridge, owned by the heirs of the late Samuel Clark and occupied by Chas E Mitchell as a confectionary store Mr Ames, night watchman noticed the smoke, and gave the alarm not a moment too soon, as Mr Trundy, who occupied the neighboring store, slept in an adjacent room and barely escaped with his life Mr Mitchell's stock of goods was entirely destroyed as were the goods in the adjoining stores east owned by the same persons, and occupied as a confectionery store by Henry Lane and also by Messrs A E. Pote & Co, for same purpose The store on the west end owned by Hollis Bowman, was seriously damaged, but fortunately the firemen were able to prevent its further spread

The late hour of the fire, and the early hour we are compelled to go to press, together with the confusion occasioned by a fire three doors from one's office, render it impossible to give a very fair approximation to the loss We give as near as possible

The Clark heirs, three stores $2000 insured $1500 Hollis Bowman's store, No 4 Bowman's Block, $500, fully insured Warren & Trundy, victualing saloon, lose $1000, no insurance Chas E Mitchell, confectionery, $3000, insured $2500 Henry Lane loses $4500, insured $1500 A E Pote & Co, $1500, insured $1000 The Mercantile Library and Trask's Photograph Saloon were damaged, but not heavily

This is the fourth time in two years that fire has been within a few rods of us, and our office has been protected by the department and we have come to the conclusion, that the firemen of Bangor are entitled to the thanks of the public for their promptness and efficiency, and we can assure them that for their exertions and efforts in our behalf we hold them in grateful remembrance

A THIEF CAUGHT A man calling himself J G Bennett, came to Bangor about three weeks since, evidently pretty well played out from taking too much red-eye Unfortunately for the reputation of the craft, he is a printer He applied for work at this office, and was refused on account of his condition He evidently is no fool, for he had the good sense to make no more applications until he became sober He finally succeeded in obtaining temporary employment at the office of Samuel S Smith, over the express office Of an inquiring turn of mind, he soon discovered a trap door leading down to a room where it was necessary to oil the shafting which drives their press, and from that he obtained an entrance to a room occupied by the Eastern Express as a place to store unclaimed baggage It was no longer unclaimed, for Bennett set about claiming all that was valuable without making application at the office He filled his trunk with all sorts of goods, and that which was not exactly suitable to carry away, he distributed among his female friends But alas for Bennett, his career was short The disagreeable Express officials soon missed the goods, and Bennett was caught and transferred from Smith's comfortable office to the watch house And worse than that, cruel Judge Clark bound him over for trial, and he is now in jail It will be well to mention, that his friends may know his whereabouts that he hailed from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, St Louis, Milwaukie, Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston and New York, and from the manner which he managed here, we should judge that he is especially adapted to some larger market. He was evidently no stranger to a Police Office, and wasn't at all astonished at the unfortunate turn his affairs took.

POSTPONEMENT On account of the severe storm last evening, the exhibition of the Hibernian Dramatic Club was postponed to next Monday, 21st The misfortune of this disappointment should cause no loss to them, as we are assured that they will then give an entertainment worthy of the most liberal patronage

—The Concert this evening at City Hall, promises to be a fine affair In addition to the Band and Orchestra, the services of Mr Orn Pearson, who is now here for a short time, have been secured Mr P. is too well known here for further comment Give them a bumber

MAILS DELAYED The running off of a freight train on the Grand Trunk Railroad near Yarmouth, prevented the arrival of usual Western Mail An extra train from Waterville brought the mail and passengers from the Portland and Kennebec Railroad, arriving here about 12 o clock.

At half past ten last evening only two mails had arrived at the Post Office in this city, the Exeter and the Bucksport The storm prevented the arrival of all other.

—We congratulate our Democratic fellow citizens on our Aldermanic triumph in Ward Seven —[Democrat

Which is calling things by their right names no doubt, however it may sound to those who bolted the Republican nomination

THE PINE TREE STATE AND HER POET It will be remembered that Maine's favorite Poet David Barker, of Exeter, composed and read a poem of welcome to the Hugh De Payens Commandery of Knight Templar, at the Banquet given in their honor by the St Johns Commandery in this city in August last. It was a gem of its kind, and we are pleased to know that the Hugh De Payens are to have it in a form suitable for preservation It has been copied by the author, and to make it the more emblematic of the old Pine Tree State, he has caused it to be framed with pine twigs, nicely put together by Messrs Dakin & Son, on Main Street, making a most unique and neat frame We have no doubt it will be highly prized by the Melrose Commandery, as it will serve to keep alive pleasant recollections of the author as well as their excursion to Maine

We understand that a New York Publishing House have made Mr Barker liberal offers for the copyright of his many choice and beautiful poems We trust that the arrangements will be completed and that his writings will be published that they may become favorites in every household

INSTALLATION The officers of Mount Moriah Royal Arch Chapter, were installed last evening, in the spacious appartments of the Masonic fraternity of this city, by Lemuel Bradford, G K, assisted by E F Dillingham as Marshal. The following are the officers for the ensuing year

After the installation services the companions partook of a bountiful collation, spent a short time in social intercourse, and then retired to their respective homes, happy in the belief that the Chapter had favorably commenced a useful year

WINTER LINGERS IN THE LAP OF SPRING Prophecy evidently isn't our forte No sooner had we predicted rain, than lo! a tremendous snow storm was upon us, nearly if not quite as severe as any of the season. Yesterday the snow flakes fell thick and fast the [illegible]

[illegible] serious trouble from heavy drifts. If this storm had visited us six weeks earlier, when there was a heavy bottom of snow, it would have prevented travel for several days. The spring sun will soon melt it and we shall return to usual mud.

MT HOPE We understand that our correspondent "P" in yesterday's paper labored under a misapprehension of the plan proposed for a receiving tomb at Mt. Hope The Committee who had the thing in charge fully appreciated the necessity of securing the characteristics which our correspondent insists upon as so inseparable from a properly arranged receptacle for the dead They have accordingly so planned the structure as to secure these in the greatest degree consistent with other particulars, such as a uniformity of temperature at a low degree above the freezing point &c Before concluding upon either the plan of building or its location an examination was had of similar structures at Mt Auburn and other cemeteries and in fixing upon the design to be adopted they have endeavored to secure all the desirable qualities of such a work They think they have succeeded and from what we can judge from the plan we think so too The work is now under contract and the contractors have already made progress with their job and before another winter arrives we trust the City will have the blessing of such a receptacle as shall at once embrace all the desirable features combined in the beauty of finish and durability of structure

—An Augusta dispatch states that in the Senate yesterday afternoon the bill incorporating the Portland Union Depot was amended by refusing the power to take land but granting the privilege to purchase and passed to be engrossed In the House the general Railroad bill was referred to the next Legislature, and the Senate concurred The bills to allow a majority to vote the use of school houses for religious meetings also passed—The resolve in favor of the Maine General Hospital at Portland passed the House in concurrence

—A Lewiston dispatch says a snow storm commenced there Wednesday afternoon, and still continues with wind in the northeast About a foot has fallen which is somewhat drifted

—A dispatch from Rockland says a severe north east snow storm commenced there at an early hour on Wednesday evening, and continued through the night and forenoon of the next day The wind has blown a gale and much snow has fallen which is very badly drifted

—Mayor Davis of Ellsworth declines a second election The salary being only $150 and as in that office honors are easy there no [illegible] Mr Davis has given general satisfaction

—The Ellsworth American says Mr [illegible] Jordan of Otis threshed this winter 100 bushels of oats raised in that town on burnt land by Mr McFarland This is the largest crop of oats raised in the county by one person probably

—Died in Standish, at his late residence on the morning of January 20, Rev James Weston, aged 78 years He was born in that part of Hallowell which is now Augusta on the 9th of November 1791 He was the son of Hon Nathan Weston now dead [illegible] brother of early Chief Justice of Maine [illegible] survives him He graduated at Bowdoin College in 1810 studied Divinity with Rev Jonathan Cogswell D D of Saco and was ordained at Lebanon February [illegible] 1824 Subsequently he left the ministry and removed to Standish in the autumn of 1840 On the 18th of November 1840 he married Sarah [illegible] of Saco who survives him [illegible] seven survive the eldest being Dr J C Weston, of Bangor

SHIPWRECK AND LOSS OF A MAINE CAPTAIN The ship Neva of Nova Scotia which left the Tyne, England for Boston with a cargo of [illegible] was recently wrecked on the outer Dowsing Mr Samuel Davidson, of North Shields pilot was taken on board in the usual course but the storm raging so furiously the vessel drifted down to the Line Inshore [illegible] where she struck on the outer Dowsing early in the morning About three o clock the large boat belonging to the vessel put off containing seven of the crew and the pilot and by pulling and drifting bid fair to come ashore safely at Mumby-cum chapel near Alford but unfortunately the boat capsized and only one seaman out of the crew of eight was rescued alive The smaller boat left the vessel about the same time, and contained Capt. Dix and the first and second mate This had drifted down to Ingoldmells and was overturned within a short distance from the shore — The captain had taken off his coat boots &c, and prepared to swim When the boat upset the second mate contrived to get upon the keel and the accident having been perceived from the shore two men went into the sea and brought the man to land and shortly recovered the captain's body The second mate was taken to a house near by The body of the first mate was not recovered A steamer passed the crew in their perilous position but offered no assistance Dix was taken to the town of Ingoldmells church

The following are the names of a few of the crew who signed articles at the North Shields shipping office —Mate, William Stranger, 27 years old belonging to Portland, able seaman, Thos, Burns 30, St John Barthol'w Hurley - New York John Fakey 28, St. John's and James M Donald Glasgow Wm Stranger, the mate of the Neva joined the vessel previous to her leaving the Tyne as he wanted to come to America

The Ellsworth American says Capt Chas B Dix of Tremont was partial owner of the above named ship and intended to take charge of her on her arrival in the U S —The late Captain George H Dix was a worthy and highly esteemed citizen of Tremont, and an enterprising and promising young Captain and his sad sorrowful end and misfortune are deeply felt and deplored by his friends and citizens abroad

Several of the leading business men of Toledo Ohio have been arrested on the charge of selling unstamped perfumes

One of the colored pages of the South Carolina Legislature saved all his earnings that he might acquire an education at Howard University Washington

The New York Senate has before it a bill reducing the commutation or head money upon emigrants entering the port of New York from $2,50 to $1.50 per passenger The Commissioners of Emigration have out of this head-money fund, during the last eight years, guaranteed the State against able-bodied emigrants becoming a charge upon it, have paid their own expenses, and accumulated a surplus of considerably over a million of dollars. To anticipate the reduction or removal of this head-money provision at other ports, it is proposed to fix the amount at the sum which was the standard before the days of the marine hospital and quarantine, which will still afford a surplus for all legitimate uses.

Office of FISKE & HATCH,

Bankers and Dealers in Government Securities,

No 5 Nassau Street, New York,

February 15th, 1870

The remarkable success which attended our negotiation of the Loans of the CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY and the WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, and the popularity and credit which these Loans have maintained in the markets, both in this country and Europe, have shown that the First Mortgage Bonds of wisely located and honorably managed Railroads are promptly recognized and readily taken as the most suitable, safe, and advantageous form of Investment, yielding a more liberal income than can hereafter be derived from Government Bonds, and available to take their place

Assured that in the selection and negotiation of superior Railroad Loans we are meeting a great public want and rendering a valuable service—both to the holders of Capital and to those great National works of internal improvement whose intrinsic merit and substantial character entitle them to the use of Capital and the confidence of investors—we now offer with special confidence and satisfaction the

First Mortgage Bonds

OF THE

CHESAPEAKE and OHIO RAILROAD CO

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad connecting the Atlantic coast and the magnificent harbors of the Chesapeake Bay with the Ohio River at a point of reliable navigation, and thus with the entire Railroad system and water transportation of the great West and Southwest forms the additional East and West Trunk Line, so imperatively demanded for the accommodation of the immense and rapidly growing transportation between the Atlantic seaboard and Europe on the one hand and the great producing regions of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys on the other

The importance of this Road as a new outlet from the West to the sea magnifies it into one of national consequence, and insures to it an extensive through traffic from the day of its completion, while, in the development of the extensive agricultural and mineral resources of Virginia and West Virginia it possesses, along its own line, the elements of a large and profitable local business

Thus the great interests both general and local, which demand the completion of the CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILROAD to the Ohio River, afford the surest guarantee of its success and value, and render it the most important and substantial Railroad enterprise now in progress in this Country

Its superiority as an East and West route and the promise of an immense and profitable trade awaiting its completion have drawn to it the attention and cooperation of prominent Capitalists and Railroad men of this City of sound judgment and known integrity whose connection with it together with that of eminent citizens and business men of Virginia and West Virginia, insures an energetic honorable, and successful management

The Road is completed and in operation from Richmond to the celebrated White Sulphur Springs of West Virginia, 227 miles, and there remain but 200 miles (now partially constructed) to be completed, to carry it to the proposed terminus on the Ohio river at or near, the mouth of the Big Sandy river, 150 miles above Cincinnati and 350 miles below Pittsburg

Lines are now projected or in progress through Ohio and Kentucky to this point, which will connect the Chesapeake and Ohio with the entire Railroad systems of the West and Southwest and with the Pacific Railroad

Its valuable franchises and superior advantages will place the CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY among the richest and most powerful and trustworthy corporations of the country and there exists a present value in completed road and work done equal to the entire amount of the mortgage

The details of the Loan have been arranged with special reference to the wants of all classes of investors and combine the various features of convenience safety, and protection against loss or fraud

The Bonds are in denominations of

$1000, $500, and $100

They will be issued as Coupon Bonds payable to the Bearer and may be held in that form, or

The Bond may be registered in the name of the owner, with the coupons remaining payable to bearer attached, the principal being then transferable only on the books of the Company, unless reassigned to bearer, or

The coupons may be detached and cancelled, the Bond made a permanent Registered Bond, transferable only on the books of the Company, and the interest made payable only to the registered owner or his attorney

The three classes will be known respectively as

1st 'Coupon Bonds payable to Bearer

2d 'Registered Bonds with Coupons attached

3d 'Registered Bonds with Coupons detached and should be so designated by Correspondents in specifying the class of Bonds desired

They have thirty years to run from January 15 1870, with interest at six per cent per annum from November 1, 1869 PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK

The interest is payable in MAY and NOVEMBER, that it may take the place of that of the earlier issues of Five Twenties and suit the convenience of our friends who already hold Central and Western Pacific Bonds, with interest payable in January and July and who may desire, in making additional investments, to have their interest receivable at different seasons of the year

The Loan is secured by a mortgage upon the entire Line of Road from Richmond to the Ohio River, with the equipment and all other property and appurtenances connected therewith

A SINKING FUND OF $100,000 PER ANNUM IS PROVIDED FOR THE REDEMPTION OF THE BONDS, TO TAKE EFFECT ONE YEAR AFTER THE COMPLETION OF THE ROAD

The mortgage is for $15 000,000, of which $2 000,000 will be reserved and held in trust for the redemption of outstanding Bonds of the Virginia Central Railroad Company, now merged in the CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO

Of the remaining $13 000,000, a sufficient amount will be sold to complete the road to the Ohio river, perfect and improve the portion now in operation, and thoroughly equip the whole for a large and active traffic

The present price is 90 and accrued interest

A [illegible] so amply secured so carefully guarded, and so certain hereafter to command a prominent place among the favorite securities in the markets, both of this Country and Europe will be at once appreciated and quickly absorbed

Very respectfully,

FISK & HATCH,

Bankers

P S We have issued pamphlets containing full particulars statistical details, maps etc, which will be furnished upon application.

THE RIGHT TO GROWL

BY J G BLANCHARD

Will some one solve the question, why
No philosophic owl
In all that's writ of human rights,
Has named the Right to Growl?
The right of each in his own way
To show his discontent
Is "natural and inherent," sure,
And quite self evident

Why even the cur you pat or kick,
If he does not like it quite
May growl and there's no decent log
But would sustain his right
And sure no right a dog enjoys
The meanest man may claim
If liberty is anything
More than an empty name

When things don't suit, and one can't find
A reason that is pat
And can do nothing but to growl
Why shouldn't he do that?
And if one's lot is hard to bear
Even through his own defect
Growling may keep his spirits up
And save his self respect!

Who knows what growling saves the State?
Steam's harmless that has vent
But close the valve and feed the fire,
And see how things are rent!
All Americans respect
The sacred right to growl,
For if the poor might growl no more
Then straightway Rome would howl

A Pawtucket man while riding in a crowded horse car put his elbow through the window He told the conductor that he would pay for the glass, but had not the money with him The conductor said "all right," and allowed him to go without even leaving his name After reaching home he sent the President of the Company $1 50 to pay for a new pane of glass The uprightness and rareness of the act pleased the latter so much that he sent him some $2 50 worth of tickets in return The honesty of the Pawtucket man is not so wonderful but the liberality of the President is what perplexes us

Mr Francis Stevens of Canton Mills, has a heifer which dropped a calf the last of February though she will not be two years old till the 27th of April She is half Durham and half Jersey and promises remarkably well Has any one had any experience in crossing the Durham and Jersey?

See to it that the lambs have a dry and warm place, a little pains in this direction will save many of them when they come in early Let the calves have good bedding which should be shifted often Whether you neglect to have a neat and comfortable place for your children at school or not you should not neglect the lambs and calves and cots In order to thrive well these must receive proper care

WHOSE FUNERAL As the members of the Legislature, who visited our city yesterday passed slowly in their carriages through one our thoroughfares, an old lady, attracted by their solemn and dignified appearance stepped into a store and asked, Whose funeral is that?" The shopkeeper replied "Why, that's the Legislature" "Du tell" said the old lady, "when did he die?" The questioner did not know that the Legislature is a body that never expires [New Bedford Mercury

THE BALDWIN We have been struck with the diversity of appearance in the Baldwin apple in different parts of the State, during the last year We never raised meaner ones while in some places we have seen them of remarkable size and beauty. Mr Wm L Bennett of Hartford exhibited to us the finest we ever saw some of those he raised the last year measured thirteen inches in circumference which is larger than we ever knew recorded of the Baldwin His location is a superior one for raising and keeping them. On Standard in another column. SPEER'S STANDARD WINE BITTERS is highly recommended by physicians for Dyspeptics, on account of its tonic properties, its purity, and its delicious flavor

Mild certain, safe, efficient It is far the best Cathartic remedy yet discovered and at once relieves and invigorates all the vital functions without causing injury to any of them The most complete success has long attended its use in many localities and it is now offered to the general public with the conviction that it can never fail to accomplish all that is claimed for it. It produces little or no pain leaves the organs free from irritation, and never over taxes or excites the nervous system In all diseases of the skin, blood, stomach bowels, liver kidneys—of children, and in many difficulties peculiar to women it brings prompt relief and certain cure The best physicians recommend and prescribe it and no person who once uses this, will voluntarily return to the use of any other cathartic.
